The structure of the reports would be very similar, but only the property names and the fields in the query would differ. The report object has several properties, one of which is 'PropertyNames'. This property is used to set the list of fields in the query. I need to iterate through this list of properties as well as the database query, and execute each statement. I have tried the following: public void CreateReport(Report report) { List fields = report.PropertyNames;

foreach (string f in fields) { StringBuilder sb = new StringBuilder(); query = "Select * from [dbo].[" + f + "]; command.CommandText = query; command.ExecuteNonQuery(); } } What ends up happening is that the PropertyNames never gets 82157476af
